

THE DRAGON SLAYER

The beast mustered up every bit of his zeal,
But all he could strike was the Hero's right heel.

Our Hero plunged down to the deep depths of hell,
And this, my dear child, was when the beast fell.

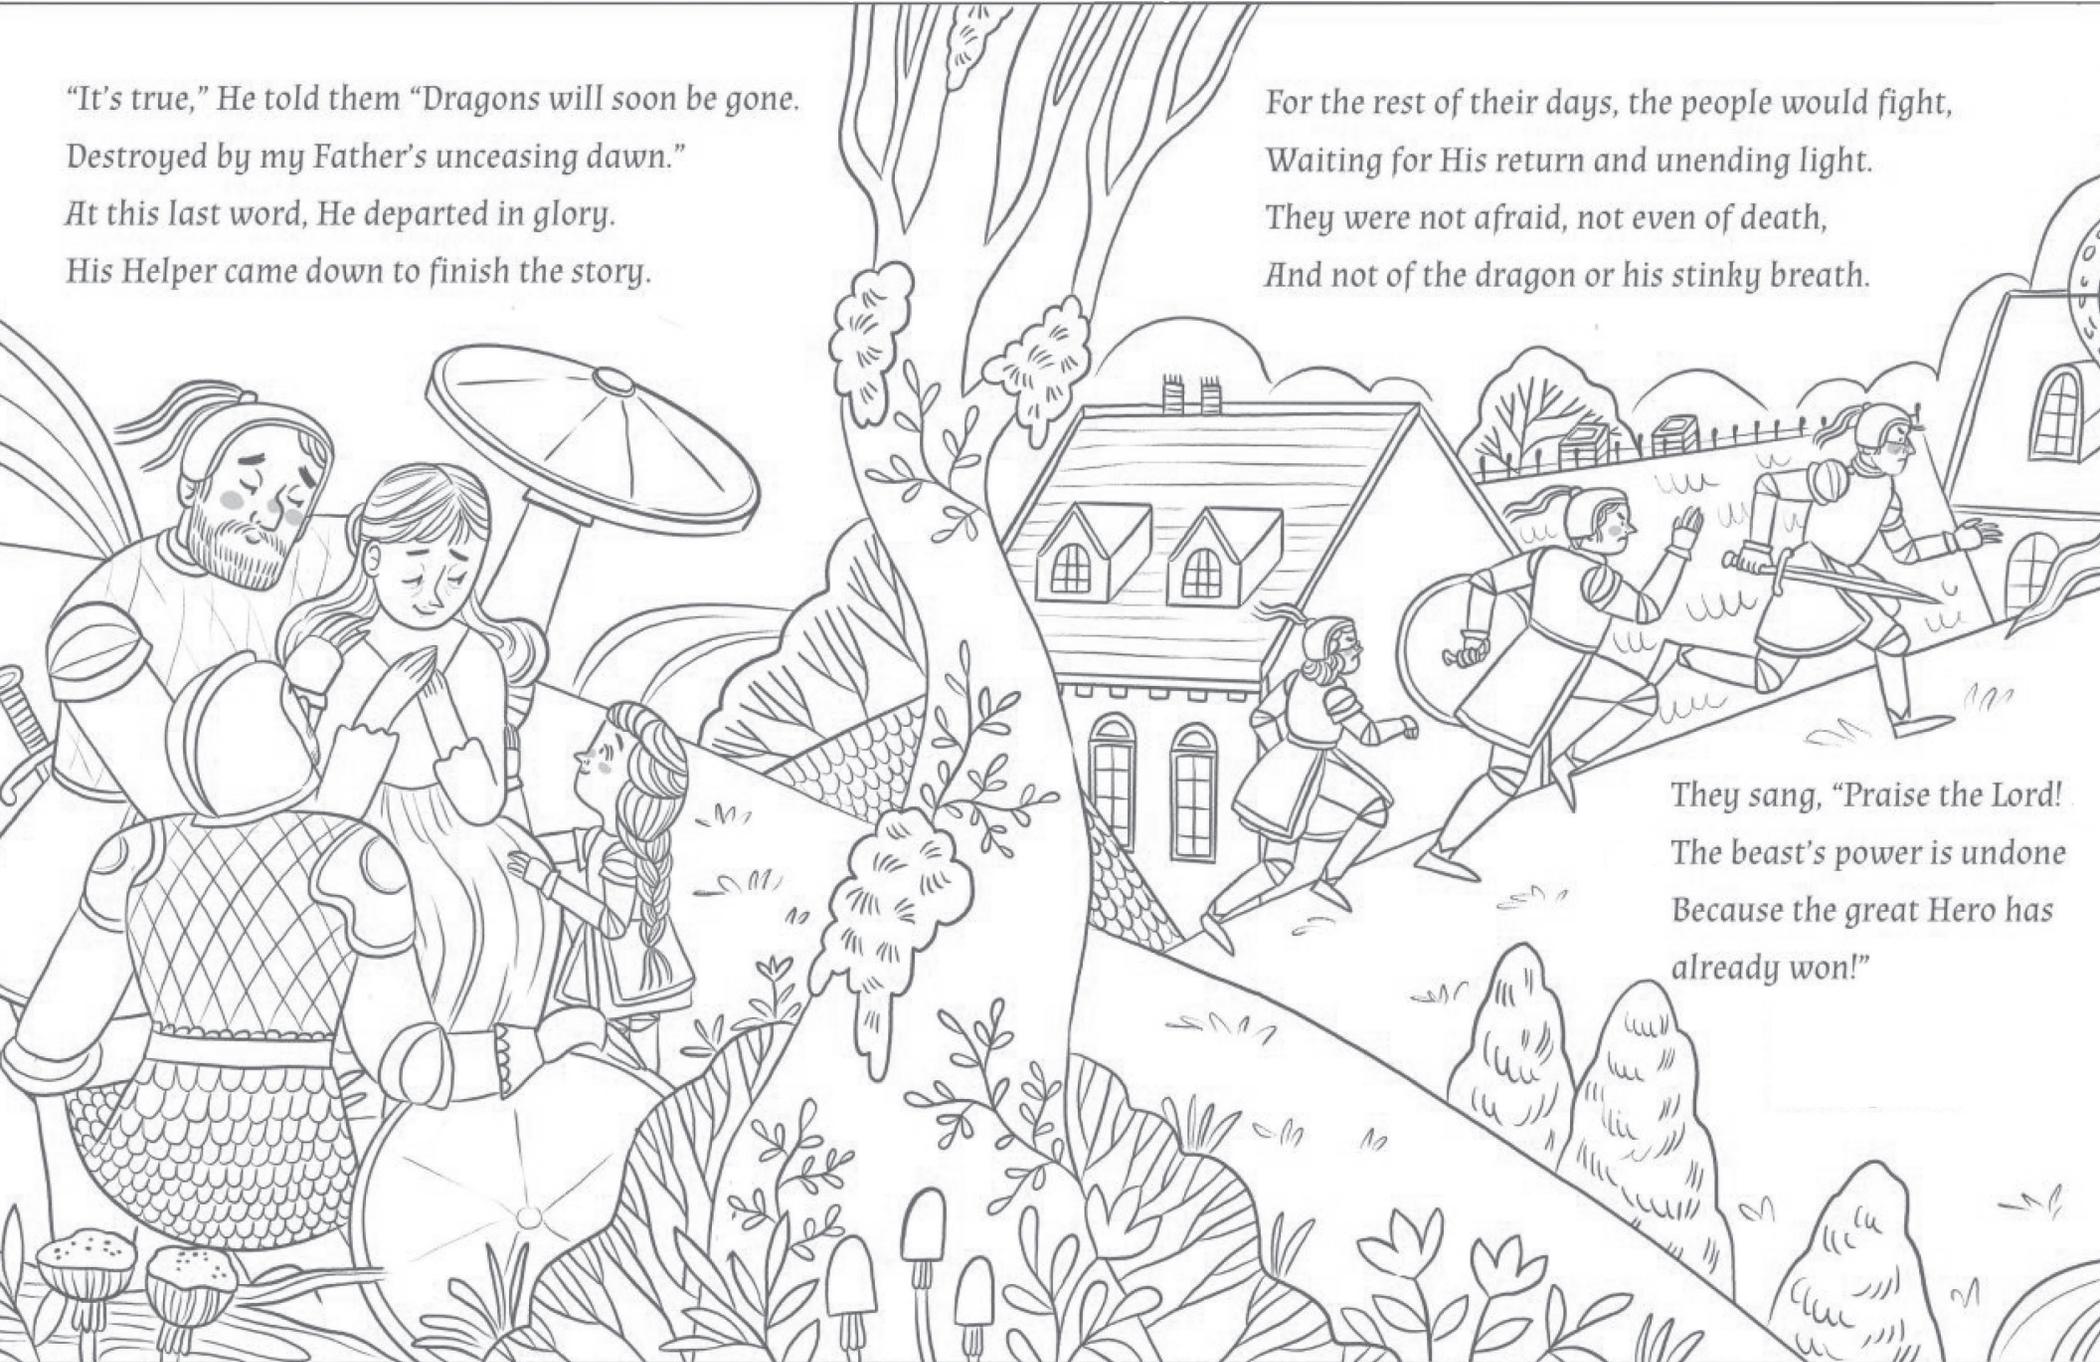

Right at the moment he thought he had won,
His power unraveled; his strength came undone.

THE DRAGON SLAYER

"It's true," He told them "Dragons will soon be gone.
Destroyed by my Father's unceasing dawn."
At this last word, He departed in glory.
His Helper came down to finish the story.

For the rest of their days, the people would fight,
Waiting for His return and unending light.
They were not afraid, not even of death,
And not of the dragon or his stinky breath.

They sang, "Praise the Lord!
The beast's power is undone
Because the great Hero has already won!"

THE DRAGON SLAYER

The dragon is Satan, and he only lies,
Like he's shooting darts from his villainous eyes.

But since the great Hero destroyed him for you,
We know that His promises will all come true.

